The Late Rev. C. B. Dana.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

At a Vestry meeting of Trinity Church, Natchez, Miss., on Thursday Feb. 27th, 1873, the following memorial and resolutions were passed as a tribute to, and in memoriam of Dr. C. B. Dana:

Never in the history of this Church has there been such a number of our Body fallen in one Ecclesiastical year, as this.

Two of our Vestry men have passed to the "Spirit Land," and now we are called upon to mourn over the loss of our Pastor.

We do not wish, by an indiscriminate Eulogy to praise his virtues, or seek to exalt his memory above its true measure; on the contrary we would wish to express our full appreciation of his character in such a manner as would be pleasing to him, if living; his modesty was of that type that it would reject fulsome adulation.

Dr. Dana was ordained Deacon by the late Bishop Moore in the State of Maryland in the year 1834—expressly that he might take charge of the Parish of Christ Church, Alexandria, D. C.

He was ordained Priest, by Bishop Mead in 1835.

He continued with constant fidelity to serve that Parish for nearly seven years.

During this time he was offered the Episcopate of the Diocese of New Hampshire, but his apprehensions of a northern climate, and his preference for the South, prevented his acceptance of the position.

He was called to St. James Parish, Port Gibson, in 1841. During the trying period of the war he ministered to them for six years and until he was called to us. He has thus been thirty years in the ministry, and during all that long period in but three Parishes; this of itself speaks volumes of praise.

His memory in both of the above Parishes is still venerated and regarded with grateful affection; and many of his old parishioners there will have the sign of regret, when they hear the sad news that they will "see his face no more, forever!"

Among the distinguished men whom he led to Confirmation and communion, stands the name of Robert E. Lee.

It was on Easter Sunday 1866 he began his pulpit ministrations in our midst. No one but he who fills the office, can realize the difficulties of a Pastor who takes charge of a large and intelligent Parish like this. He has so many tasks to perform, he has to reprove, exhort, admonish, warn and yet speak in such wise, and so wisely, as never to offend.

How he discharged the diversified and difficult task to our congregation, can best be answered by the love and respect that they now cherish for his memory.

He came to us when we were deeply involved pecuniarily; he leaves us poor indeed, but out of debt.

He came to us when our Parish was disturbed and troubled; he leaves us in entire Christian Unity and Peace.

In his intercourse with us as a Vestry, we can surely testify that it was delicate, kind, and considerate, and not the shadow of a cloud ever passed between us.

When by the press of untoward circumstances, it became necessary to reduce his salary, he cheerfully assented, and no one ever heard a murmur of complaint escape him.

Being a graduate of Dartmouth College, he was a finished scholar, and his classical attainments were so thorough that even in his last hours and on his sick couch he recognized classical quotations and assented to their proper application.

His pulpit ministrations were more pleasing, more powerful; always sound, they were free from cant.

His constant aim seemed to be to win souls by appealing to their gratitude to God, rather than to frighten them by His wrath. Of him it may be truly said, "he preached the Gospel!" It was Orthodox in his churchmanship, avoiding the extremes of bigotry on the one hand, and latitudinarianism on the other.

He was a trusted friend of our Bishop, and he looked up to him for guidance in our Diocesan Councils, as well as in the General Conventions of our Church.

Though modest even to the point of diffidence, he wielded a power by the strength of his intellect, the variedness and depth of his knowledge.

Among the various coincidences of the closing drama of his life, the following incident occurred: The Clerical and Lay delegates to our General Convention from the diocese of Mississippi in 1868 were to have been photographed in a body; it so happened that the Rev. Mr. Pickett was ill, and Rev. Mr. Pettus took his place in the group.

That group of clergymen consisted of the Rev. Messrs. Crane, Sansom, Pettus and Dana; the two first, we know had been summoned to the bedside of their dying friend; but the other was on the wing.

On Sunday last a young member of our congregation happened to be at our wharf when a transient boat landed; he casually stepped on board, having seen the Photograph, he recognized the Rev. Mr. Pettus, and told him of the extreme illness of Dr. Dana.

Mr. Pettus immediately ordered a conveyance and went to pay a brief, and it proved to be a farewell visit to his friend. Thus those four "Brethren of the Cross" met for the last time and around his dying couch.

Their names side by side have been fixed by the sunlight upon the paper, and though the canvas be frail and perishable, yet as long as it lasts, it will point them out, and link them together as co-workers in the Councils of the Church on Earth; it seems a special act of a kind Providence to permit the three successors to minister at the last to their dying brother.

In summing up an estimate of the character of our friend, we would say: As a Pastor he was kind and gentle, as a friend warm hearted and affectionate; as a member of society he was polished and very discrete, and tender and loving as a father and a husband.

It was the wish of his heart that he might be permitted to serve in the ministry forty years; but it pleased God to close the "Book of Life" one year before the forty was complete.

He was rarely absent from his post and only then at the call of duty, or on account of some Providential cause.

How often he has ministered at the altar on regular services of the Sabbath! How often he has blessed the matrimonial tie! How many he has baptized and how many buried! How often he has poured the oil of Heavenly consolation into sorrowing hearts, none can tell! The good deeds of a veteran in the service of God are written in more enduring Chronicles than the fading ones of Earth!

His life has been one long sermon both vocal and practical; seeking to teach men how to live, so that they might know how to die. His life was a living illustration of piety and godliness—his death a dying illustration of the triumph of the soul by faith over the terrors of Death. It was to be expected that such a life as his had been would be crowned with triumph at the last.

His disease from the first assumed an alarming phase, and in the midst of his sufferings it was pitiable to hear him pray for patience; his Savior had done the same in the garden of Gethsemane.

He received the warning of his approaching end with perfect calmness and composure; his chief concern seemed to be about the Church he had served so faithfully and loved so well. He struggled against weakness so as if possible to keep the "House of God" from being closed; but it was all in vain; the springs of life were too feeble, and he laid himself down to die.

One of his last and most impressive sermons, that on the opening of the New Year, was a sort of premonition of his coming doom; his now lifeless form is a commentary upon his discourse on the uncertainty of life.

When told of his approaching end, like a good Christian he set his worldly affairs in order.

His brothers, Rev. Messrs. Crane and Sansom, administered to him his last communion on earth; he spoke to them calmly and confidently of his great and certain faith; he told them of his perfect peace. His pupil, the Rev. James S. Johnson, was also with him; but the clouds of coming death had so obscured his vision he did not recognize him. It was his blessed privilege in a dying hour to echo a sentiment that he had repeated a thousand times over from the Psalms: "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is Peace."

He lingered for weeks hovering over the grave, and finally, just after the clock had ushered in Ash Wednesday, his pure spirit passed to "the God who gave it."

His last sermon has been preached; his last battle has been fought; the weary "soldier of the Cross" has laid down to pleasant dreams. The beatific vision that they say floated through his mind, may have been the beckoning spirits of his once mortal friends whom he had taught to love God, and save their souls, and who had passed on before him.

Like the strains of solemn music that so often fill the sacred temple, our memorial is one of mingled triumph and sorrow; while blessing God for such a life, it sinks into a wall ere its close, at such a loss.

Never before could the congregation of Trinity Church enter with deeper fervor into the solemn penitential lessons, than on this Ash Wednesday 1873.

"Turn ye over to me with all your hearts, and with fasting and weeping, and mourning!" "Let the Priests, the Ministers of the Lord weep between the porch and the altar."

In view of our heavy bereavement, Resolves! That we deeply deplore the death of our late Pastor, Rev. Charles B. Dana, and tender to his family our sincere sympathies. As a testimony of our respect, we will attend his funeral in a body, and assist in paying the last rites to his remains. That a copy of the above memorial and resolutions be sent to his family and spread upon our minutes.
